Walk this Way Day Promotes Health and Safety Habits to Hatboro-Horsham Elementary Students

HORSHAM – Every five to seven minutes, Crooked Billet-Hallowell Learning Community students will “Walk this Way” to 14 educational stations manned by community members on Oct. 3.

“Walk this Way Day connects students to the people in our community and their careers as it relates to safety,” said Steve Glaize, co-principal of Crooked Billet-Hallowell Learning Community. “The day also teaches students the importance of a healthy lifestyle from eating to exercise.”

All stations are outside on the school’s campus and students will travel down the sidewalks of Moreland Avenue and along Maple Avenue to walk from station 14 to 1. Students in all grade levels are participating and will stay with their homeroom class for each activity. They will arrive at their first station at 9:10 a.m. with activities ending around 11:10 a.m.

The 14 stations for students to explore are:

- Stations 1 and 7: Montgomery County Health Department
  Montgomery County Health officials will teach students best practices for pedestrian and bike safety.

- Stations 2, 5, 6 and 9: Fitness and Activity
  Community members from local fitness clubs and organizations will coach kids through aerobic exercises and drill sergeant activities.

- Stations 3 and 10: Water and Snacks
  Students will enjoy water and healthy snacks like apple slices and carrot sticks.

- Stations 4 and 12: Horsham Police Department
  In past years, the police department brought their canine unit, squad car and motorcycle.

- Station 11: Garden
  At Crooked Billet-Hallowell’s garden, students will learn about the planted vegetables and how to tend to the garden.

- Stations 8, 13, and 14: Water and Sewer Department
  Officials will inform students about the importance of clean water and staying hydrated.

Walk this Way Day is weather permitting with no rain date.

Crooked Billet-Hallowell Learning Community is located at 501 West Moreland Ave., Horsham.
